Master versus Bachelor Level

The content of the Master programme is directly linked to the nine professional duty categories and the two professional excellence categories. The PDCs and PECs form the basis of the education programme: the course content and didactic. The profile of the Master programme is derived from the national professional and educational profile Bachelor of Business Administration in Hotel Management 2012-2016, "CROHO 34411, June 20, 2013, (Foundation for National Consultation on Higher Hotelschool Education). This profile was created on behalf of the five Dutch Hotelschools, which thereby justify the license and profile to the BBA sector council and the HBO Council.

The Master programme has five PDCs that are included in the Body of Knowledge. All elements of the bachelor profile can be found in the curriculum of the master. However, the master has a substantial deepening / specialisation of the issues that are included in PDC 1, 2, 3, 6, 9 and PEC 10.11 of the Bachelor profile. This specialisation is visible in the Body of Knowledge from the master, consisting of five PDCs and takes shape in the master education programme. Decisive for the determination, pursuance and achievement of the final level of the diverse education programme components of both the Hotelschool The Hague Bachelor and Master programmes are the Dublin Descriptors adopted in 2004 for all first, second, third and short cycle programmes for higher education in Europe.

The table below shows the difference between Bachelor and Master programme with regard to the final levels achieved.

Managers of hospitality businesses deal with often complex owner relationships. The complexity is found in the fact that multiple owners may be identified, ranging from personal owners to shareholders. Furthermore, relationships with banks and venture capitalists have to be managed. When the manager is managing a unit that is part of a corporation, the manager must be able to understand and manage relationships with regional- and/or or head office superiors who represent owners. This requires an understanding of organizational politics.

Managers of hospitality businesses have to manage the relationship with the community in which they operate. The community can be considered from various focuses, ranging from neighbourhood to a global perspective. Managers will have to manage and protect the image of their company.
